

Scare Them into Submission

If a country that prides itself in freedom of speech has a government that introduces laws designed to silence views that are contrary to its current dogma, does that nation really have freedom of speech anymore? If the answer to this question is “no that government is not allowing freedom of speech”, then that country has been transformed into a communist state.

Often these issues are not complicated. Instead, they are very straight forward. According to a recent move by the current government of the United States of America, citizens will be scared into silence if they express views/opinions that challenge the current administration’s policies. The following excerpt from the Department of Homeland Security confirms they are more concerned with targeting U.S. citizens than securing the southern border.

The United States remains in a heightened threat environment fueled by several factors, including an online environment filled with false or misleading narratives and conspiracy theories, and other forms of mis- dis - and mal-information (MDM) introduced and/or amplified by foreign and domestic threat actors. These threat actors seek to exacerbate societal friction to sow discord and undermine public trust in government institutions to encourage unrest, which could potentially inspire acts of violence. Mass casualty attacks and other acts of targeted violence by lone offenders and small groups acting in furtherance of ideological beliefs and/or personal grievances pose an ongoing threat to the nation.

Absent from this political narrative is any mention of the violence against many U.S. businesses, individuals, police, and cities by groups like Black Lives Matter and Antifa. In fact, a number of politicians in the current administration were very supportive of this violence. Instead of focusing on these “bigger groups” the current administration wants to target those they describe as “lone offenders” and “small groups” that have a different point of view or opinion on matters affecting America today. Another trick used in this piece of government propaganda is when they mention “online environment filled with false and misleading narratives” they fail to mention that they worked in concert with Big Tech to “silence” any information that exposed the questionable business dealings of their candidate for the Presidency coming up to the last election.

Let’s continue examining this Department of Homeland Security edict.

While the conditions underlying the (supposed) heightened threat landscape have not significantly changed over the last year, the convergence of the following factors has increased the volatility, unpredictability, and complexity of the threat environment: (1) the proliferation of false or misleading narratives (government hates competition when it comes to creating false or misleading narratives; after all they have departments of people working on this all the time), which sow discord or undermine public trust in U.S. government institutions (which have be weaponized to spy on their own citizens); (2) continued calls for violence directed at U.S. infrastructure (wasn’t it Russia that did this to the Colonial pipeline and they were given a “pass” by the current administration?).

The masterful attempt to make all this appear acceptable shifts to the following.

.... soft targets and mass gatherings; faith-based institutions, such as churches, synagogues, and mosques; institutions of higher education; racial and religious minorities; government facilities and personnel, including law enforcement and the military; the media; and perceived ideological opponents.

So the government gets to decide whose "perceived ideology" is acceptable to them. And if doesn't align with their "flavor of the week" what happens to those who disagree with them? Not to mention the hypocrisy of including the very "law enforcement" that they have been trying to "defund" the past few years.

So this is yet another attempt to transform the USA into the Communist States of America (CSA). This way America's enemies, who are all authoritarian systems of government, can simply walk into the country without firing a shot. It appears the ideology of the current U.S. administration would welcome this take over; after all it is doing everything within its power to emulate communist ideology, including dismantling freedom of speech by scaring citizens into silence.
